The Late Lord Palmerston, A correspondent of the New York Herald furnishes the following :

RELATIONS WITH THE COURT.
Palmerston's relations with Queen Victoria were never as cordial as those of his political opponent, Lord Derby; and between the Prime Minister and the Prince of Wales there was, till recently, an open feud. The arrogant bearing of the Minister was at the bottom of this dislike. At times he assum-bottom of this dislike. At times he assumed almost the functions of royalty. In 1850, when Lord John Russell was Prime Minister and Palmerston Foreign Secretary, the Queen addressed to Lord Russell the following piquant note:

"The Queen requires, first, that Lord Palmerston will distinctly state what he proposes in a given case, in order that the Queen may know as distinctly to what she is giving her royal sanction; secondly, having once given her sanction to a measure, that it be not arbitrarily altered or modified by the Minister. Such an act she must consider as failing in sincetity to the Crown, and justly to be visited by the exercise of her constitutional right of dismissing that minister. She expects to be kept informed of what passes between him and the Foreign of what passes between him and the Foreign Minister before important decisions are ta-ken based upon that intercourse; to receive the foreign dispatches in good time, and to have the drafts for her approval sent to her in sufficient time to make herself acquainted with their contents before they must be sent off. The Queen thinks it best that Lord John Russell should show this letter to Lord Palmerston? to Lord Palmerston."

Russell did so. The imperturbable Pal-merston sent word back that he had taken a copy of the memorandum and would not fail to attend to the directions given, and went on just as before. A few months later he recognized Napoleon's coup d'etat with-out authority from either Queen or Cabinet.

Lord Palmerston was not married until he was fifty-five years of age. His chosen wife was the widow of the Earl of Cowper. At the time of their marriage Lady Palmerston was about thirty-seven years of age. She also had four children, the issue of the Earl of Cowper and all of whom were mar-Earl of Cowper, and all of whom were mar-ried at the time of her second marriage. One of the daughters, Emily Caroline Catherine Frances, was married to Lord Ashley, heir to the earldom of Shaftsbury, and the other to the Viscount Jocelyn. Her eldest son by Earl Cowper is the present peer of that name. Lady Palmerston was an ac complished and fascinating woman, and after her second marriage attained a cele-brity in the social life of the metropolis scarcely inferior to that which the political ability of her husband have won for him on the continent of Europe. She was, like her husband, a great diplomatist. It was through her that the reconciliation took place between her husband and Lord John Russell, which resulted in the formation of the Cabinet now dissolved by Palmerston's death. She was an early flame of Palmerston's when she was Lady Emily Penniston, and he faithfully waited for her many years, and the taking the part of the gladly taking her at an uncertain age, and with her four encumbrances. When Mr. Buchanan was Minister to England, he me and was introduced to Lady Palmerston and her children by Lord Palmerston, who and her children by Lord Palmerston, who alluded to his step-sons and daughters as if they were his own children. Mr. Bucha-nan was not very well posted in the English society and the Book of Peers, and the no-ble Lord was taken aback by his compli-menting him on the remarkable resem-blance which they bore to him.

Heavy Swindling Operations --- Providence Merchants Victimized out of $40,-

[From the Hartfort Courant.] For nearly two months past some of our grocery dealers have been enabled to purchase molasses, teas, sugars, etc., at aston ishing low prices, comparing with the usu ishing low prices, comparing with the usual market rates. It appears that a young man named Hopkins, a resident of Coventry, in this State, has been engaged in the grocery business in Providence some time. He purchased extensively, and, by paying his bills promptly, established good credit. For three months past he has bought largely "on time," and kas disposed of his stock at wholesale in the following manner: To a brother in New York who was in the secret, he shipped part of his purchases, and a he shipped part of his purchases, and a large amount came to this city, where it was received by his father, who left his farm in Coventry, to attend to it. The lat-ter hired a store on Morgan Street, near the corner of Charles, into which the goods, as fast as they arrived, were placed. The store was never opened for business only when some carmen arrived at the front door to some carmen arrived at the front door to carry away articles. Hopkins spent his time going about town, telling various stories to merchants, and soliciting orders, his prices being from twenty-five to fifty per cent. below the market. Of coursehe found no difficulty in making sales, for there is a peculiar fascination about a "good bargain" which, with many men, influences the proceed, without disturbing the con-

peculiar lascination about a "good bar-gain" which, with many men, influences the pocket, without disturbing the con-science, and no questions were asked. About ten days ago, young Hopkins left Providence suddenly, which opened the eyes of his creditors, and they sat down and figured up their interest in his movements, which amounted, it is said, to about $40,000.

A Murderer's Plan to Escape.

Albert L. Starkweather, the young man charged with the murder of his mother and sister, at Manchester, Conn., and now confined in the jail at Hartford, recently planned his escape thence at the sacrifice of the life of the jailor. The Hartford Courant of Monday gives a lengthy history of the affair, from which we learn that Starkweather made a confident of a fellow prisoner: er made a confident of a fellow prisoner; whom he attempted to bribe into complici-ty in his scheme, and the man exposed the planto Mr. Fenn, the jailor. Starkweather was confined alone in a cell on the east side of the jail, and recently the jailor took him in a pail of hot water to bath his feet, on account of a complaint of illness. The scoundrel noted that Mr. Fenn put his head well into the decree the cell when he had well into the door of the cell when he left the pail, which, doubtless, suggested the the pail, which, doubtless, suggested the plan he determined to pursue. The Courant says:

"On Friday evening last, Starkweather-called to Leonard (his fellow-convict who attended on the prisoners,) who went to his cell, and found him in unusual good spirits. He was a good deal more 'chirp' than he had been. After some unimportant conversation, he said: 'John, do you know what I want?' 'No.' 'Can you keep a what I want?' 'No.' 'Can you keep a secret?' 'Yes, if it is not a bad one; but if it is a bad one I don't want to hear it.' Finally, Starkweather unbosomed himself, and said substantially as follows:

and said substantially as follows:

'Do you know the reason I wanted you to get me that rope? I didn't want to hang clothes upon it. And do you know the reason why I didn't want to be moved around to the other side of the jail? The reason was, I was thinking about getting out of here. I want to get out in some way, for I have either got to be hung or go to State's Prison for life. Mr. Fenn brought me water once to bathe my feet in, and he will do it again, and I'm all re.dy for him this time. Now I'll tell you, and you musn't say a word about it. To-morrow (Saturday) night, I'm going to send for water again. Fenn will bring it up here. When he opens Fenn will bring it up here. When he opens the door he will reach in and set the pail down as he did before. When he does this down as he did before. When he does this I am going to take that stick (a center part of his bead-stead, made of oak, about two inches square and two feet long, making an ugly weapon.) and knock him with his face down on to the bottom of the cell. Then I shall put a towel in his mouth, and with a rope tie him down so that he can not move rope tie him down so that he can not move or make any noise, if he is inclined to. I'll get his keys out of his pocket, and when I get outside, the d—l himself can't stop me. Now, what I want of you is, to keep out of my way. If you get in the way it will be the worst thing you ever did. I shall take the club with me. I don't want to kill you; but if you are in the way I shall get by you in some way; but I'll put a towel round the end of that stick before I start, so if you are hit it won't kill you! You can keep out of the way if you have a mind to. by going to hit it won't kill you! You can keep out of the way if you have a mind to, by going to the other end of the jail, and you need n't know anything about it,' &c.

Leonard interrupted Stark weather frequently during his talk, telling him his plan wouldn't work, etc., but the latter told him to keep still, and 'Hear me, hear me.' After he had concluded, Leonard told him that he should inform Mr. Fenn; that a man who would murder his mother and man who would murder his mother and sister, and then plot the murder of two oth-ers, didn't deserve any pity, etc. This made Starkweather greatly excited; he begged that nothing might be said; declared that he would always be as he ought to be, and shed tears freely. Then he was mad with himself for having divulged his plot, and said if he had kept the secret to himself, all would have worked well. Finally, he said he would give Leonard an order for $2000 if

> The Mercutio of New Orleans-The Vicissitudes of Life.

The Crescent gives an incident in this morning's issue, illustrating a feature of Southern society since the war. A relic of the past is seen in a man, bearing upon his face and body the impress of many years. This man walks the streets daily, bearing the marks of misfortune, amid the friends he had known in better years, but with an appearance so changed, one can hardly re-cognize in him the Mercutio of the Crescent City, the gay, witty and elegant gentleman, who was at one time the very leader of fashion. Seedy habiliments, a bent body and wrinkled face, have nearly obliterated all in him that was familiar in the past, Inheriting a great fortune, he increased it largely by marriage, and, from his profes-sion at the bar, had an income of forty or fifty thousand a year, and received a single fee of sixty thousand dollars upon a claim on real estate in the lower part of the city. This wealth he scattered with princely generosity and royal profusion. He was a Lucullus at home, and his hospitalities aspired to all the magnificence of the ancient Roman publishment.

In 1837 he gave a single soiree that cost $25,000, and which exceeded in splendor any thing ever before known here. The very floors over which the dancers moved were covered with scenic paintings, the work of the most accomplished artist then in New Orleans, and in the saloon where gaming tables were arranged stood two baskets, one filled with bank notes and the other with gold, for the use of those guests who were unfortunate with the fickle godess. were unfortunate with the fickle godess. The dispenser of this gorgeous hospitality is now dependent upon his relatives. He takes his losses with Christian, resignation, and does not fly from the world or rail against it, like Timon of Athens, but moves through the world with a pleasant and urbane manner, as if he had still the princely fortune at command. Such cases as this are common since the war, and in this "Relic of the past," the Crescent writer has been happy in bringing out one of the best features of the Southern people. It is not a rare sight here to see a threadbare man passing by his own fine house in possession of the military, casting one sad glance toward it, and then moving on as cheerful and resigned as if he had just come from the familiar doors. In every Southern city the familiar doors. In every Southern city can be seen the same noble men, ruined by the war, yet content in the thought that the sacrifice was made for conscience sake,-

A FARMER WITHOUT ARMS .- W: B. Beaucamp, of Onondaga county, N. Y, sends to the American Agriculturist an interesting account of a farmer he formerly knew, who was born without arms:

Instead of appealing to the charitable for support, he commenced early to help himself. His first property was a hen and her chickens; next a pet lamb, and afterward a shaggy colt. He took good care of these, and increased his stock a little at a time, will be become a prosperous farmer. Hayand increased his stock a little at a time, until he became a prosperous farmer. Having no hands, he learned to use his toes, which were longer than common. His legs were also very flexible, and, by practice, he was enabled to readily perform most operations with ease. He put on and took off his own clothing, shaved and fed himself, milked his own cows, and took part in most of the labors of the farm. He was a terror to evil-doers, whom he could punish with to evil-doers, whom he could punish with severity. He was powerfully built, and possessed of great strength in the head and shoulders. He would but like a ram, or seize an offending urchin with his teeth, and shake him with bull-dog tenscity. He died at the eye of seventy leaving a lawy. died at the age of seventy, leaving a large family—having been married three times.

The Times on Bulwer.

Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton has lately made a speech before an English agricultural society, which the London Times, in the general dullness of public affairs, makes a text for a leading article. The epigrammatic character of the baronet is quite in the old style of the Thunderer, which rarely now treats its readers to such speci-mens of sparkling and delightful writing. We quote the introductory paragraphs of the article:

Among the men of our time no one has been endowed with greater and more ver-satile powers than Sir Edward Billwer Lyt-ton. His very name, in its frequent transmutation, bears witness to the protean and plastic nature of his genius. He has de-lighted a whole generation by the novelty. variety, ingenuity, and grotesqueness of his invention. He has an unlimited com-mand of all the characters of common life; a dandy, a highwayman, a scholar, a swin-dler, or a Jesuit, all flow from his magical pen with equal fidelity and facility; he has ransacked history and culled all the choic-est flowers of fiction; he is a political writer of great vigor and acuteness, a poet of some merit and originality, and has won such laureis as a translator may tope to attain. He is, besides all this, a brilliant debator, and illustrates the dry disputes of politics with a profusion of epigram and antithesis to which no one can lay claim. A Liberal in his youth, a Conservative in his riper years, he has seen both sides of the shield, and knows which is silver and which is golden. He has ransacked ancient times for fresh subjects for his genius, and revived the picture of the corrupt empire of Rome, with its wit, its dissoluteness, and luxury, at least as vividly as any modern painter of ancient manners. Such a man comes armed at all points, Such a man comes armed at all points, and there would seem to be no subject on which he could be taken at a disadvantage. The true, the beautiful, and the ideal wit at his call embody themselves in whatever earthly subject he pleases to select for his theme. He has, moreover, been a Secretate of State, and probably looks to be a Secretary of State again, when he will realize his magnificent dream of penetrating North America with a succession of British colonies, each of them in due time requiring from us a guaranteed loan for a connecting from us a guaranteed loan for a connecting railway, and another for fortifications along frontier of three thousand miles, beside a regiment or two for each to defend them against Yankee aggression. What must be the stupefying power of an agricultural meeting when even such a man as this, to whom nature has denied nothing which might serve to make him the amuse ment or delight of his fellows, cannot eman-cipate himself from its Beeotian tendency? To place such a man in such a situation is like harnessing Pegasus to a sandcart or diverting the fountain of Castalia to turn a four mill; only there is this difference, that Pegasus might have drawn the cart and Castalia might have turned the mill, while the poet, philosopher and novelist fairly succumbs under the deadening influences of a Hertfordshire agricultural meeting.

Saturday morning he notified Mr. Martin, deputy jailor, giving him all the particulars of his interviews with Stark weather from the start. Mr. Fenn was at once advised, and in company with Mr. Martin, went immediately to Stark weather's cell, and talked with him. He assumed an innocint air (and he can do it when he attempts it) and professed that

Can a Person Born a Slave Inherit Real Estate In New York? SUPREME COURT-CIRCUIT-KINGS COUNTY

Refore Justice Scragham Joanna Saunders vs. Margaret Stiff, et al. This was an action of ejectment. The real estate lies in the City of Brooklyn. The plaintiff was born a slave in the State of Virginia, but purchased her freedom prior to 1835, since which year she has been a resident of the State of New York. She resident of the State of New York. She claimed title to the pre.nises as heir-atiaw of her uncle, Glasgow Walker, who was also born a slave in Virginia, but jurchased his freedom prior to 1835, since which year, until his death, he also resided in this State. In 1842 he purchased the real estate, the subject of this action, and died in 1853, seized thereof, intestate and without issue.

The right to recover was resisted, on the ground that the plaintiff had no inheritable blood, because the laws of Virginia did not allow marriage among slaves, who were mere chattels, and legally incapable of marriage, of family relationship, and of owning, transmitting and inheriting real estate. The code of Virginia was introduced and cited by the defendant's counsel in sup port of this theory.

The Court directed a verdict for the plaintiff, and judgment on the verdict, subject to the opinion of the court at general term.

Shocking Occurrence.

A shocking tragedy occurred in the town of Caledonia, Radine county, Wisconsin, on the 1st inst. A lad named John Stitesky, aged nineteen years, shot first his father and mother and then himself. The following are the circumstances: The father, who was a farmer in evaluation was a farmer in excellent circumstances, had been laboring in the woods during the day, and had come in at nightfall for his supper. The meal was prepared, and the mother called John, who is an only son, to mother called John, who is an only son, to come in to tea. The aged couple sat down to their meal, thinking the boy would presently join them, when suddenly a shot was fired through the window of the room, and the father was struck by a ball in the left arm, completely shattering it at the elbow. The mother started up, and at the same instant another report resounded, and sha The mother started up, and at the same instant another report resounded, and she was struck in the abdomen by a bullet, which passed completely through her body. The next moment another discharge was heard in the yard, and the father summoned strength enough to get out doors, where he found his son weltering in his blood, and already gesping his less the murderer. already gasping his last. The murderer died almost instantly. The father and mother were both alive at last accounts, but there was no possibility that the latter could survive, while it is exceedingly doubtful whether the father recovers. The murderer was not of sound mind, but was not regard-ed as insane. The family were Bohemians.

News of the Day.

T. H. Ogden, Clerk of the Louisville and Nashvill railroad, at Nashville, is a default-er to the amount of $6000. He absconded, and was arrested at Atlanta, Georgia.

Tommy Cooke, a thief, was hung by a tigilance committee in Montana Territory, ou Monday of last week. The committee has issued a general warning to rascals of all kinds to make themselves scarce.

Secretary McCulloch and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue have under consideration a circular regulating trade between the United States and Canada. The circular will be issued in a day or two.

General Banks' report of the Red river disaster is published. It charges the failure apon Commodore Porter, and embraces about the same statements heretofore made public in the General's speeches. Eleven new cases of cholera were reported yesterday on the steamer Atlanta. A captured blockade-runner is being fitted up to receive for the present the passengers of the Atlanta who have not been affected by Governor Parsons addressed a meeting of prominent citizens of New York yesterday, in behalf of destitute people of Alabama. He said one-third of the people are entirely destitute. Steps are to be taken to afford relief. Gov. Parsons goes to Boston to make a similar appeal.

The explosion at the Wyoning Hotel, New York, is explained. The man who left the box at the hotel has been arrested, and says the box contained chemical oils, which he had in his possession, as agent of a house, as a sample. Thirteen persons were injured by the explosion, and two killed.

The monthly statement of the public debt, as telegraphed a few days ago, was very incorrect. During the month of October the national debt was decreased four million of dollars. In the month of September the debt was decreased to the amount of $12,700,000, so that the diminutes are September 1st emounts to nearly September 1st amounts to nearly $17,000,000.

Governor Fletcher, of Missouri, made a speech at Sedalia a few nights since, defin-ing the test oath. He says he regards it as behind the progressive spirit of the age, but it is no infringement of religious freedmen, and must be enforced. He was very severe on Frank Blair, and denounced as false his ents that returns of votes on the Constatements that returns stitution were falsified.

A curious railroad accident occurred at Clinton, Conn., a few days ago. An express train was approaching, when a cow, annoyed by a small dog, dashed on to the rails. When the train had passed, the cow lay with her head cut off, and the little dog, with his tail cut off, sat between the rails, looking after the retiring train, with a face of the most intense astonishment and disof the most intense astonishment and dis-

Talbott & Co., well known commission merchants in St. Louis, is now in confinement at Schofield Barracks, and will shortly be arraigned before a military commission on the charge of boat-burning. From the prominent position occupied by Mr.
Harwood in social and business circles, his case is contemplated with much interest, as well as curiosity.

A Washington special announces that all the plans for the trial of Jeff. Davis have fallen through, and that he is now to be pardoned, on condition that he leaves the country, never more to return. In addition to prominent Southern men and women, Horace Greeley, Henry Ward Beecher, and other prominent men, have interceded with the President, who has been induced to make treason odious by packing Jeff. off to Europe.

A dispatch from Washington states: The President has not yet taken up the papers in the Wirz case. Judge Holt has prepared a very elaborate brief of all the evidence. It is not at all likely that the President wil It is not at all likely that the President will change the verdict of the Commission. They found him guilty of all the charges and specifications, and he will probably be hung within a week. The President, however, in order to satisfy the appeals which have been made to him, will examine thoroughly into the case before he gives it his approval.

THE FENIANS IN CALIFORNIA .- A San Francisco correspondent of the Chicago Times says:

The war cry of the Fenians is ringing through California. Circles have been formed in every town of importance in the State, and there is great enthusiasm among the Irishmen on the subject of a war be-tween the children of the Green Isle and the English nation. The recent lively dispatches which have reached here concerning the order in Ireland and America, have made the blood of Irishmen tingle with pleasure at the thought of freedom for their pleasure at the thought of records for their glorious country, now, alas, crushed beneath the mailed heel of English despotism. The Fenians are numbered by thousands in San Francisco, and they have a mass meeting advertised to take place to-morrow evening, at Union Hall, for the purpose of arousing the Irish people more thoroughly. arousing the Irish people more thoroughly. Jeremiah Kavanaugh is the Head Center for this State, and he has been doing good work for the past few months. He was traveling for several weeks, recently in the mountain towns, organizing his country-men. There are but few people in this country who do not sympathize with Ire-land and pray for her liberation.

EXTRAORDINARY DINNER PARTY-A New York correspondent of the Indianapolis Journal, says:

A queer party sat down to dinner the other day at Delmonico's, embracing Alexander H. Stephens, Horace Greeley, Roger A. Pryor, Theodore Tilton, (of the Independent;) John H. Reagan, ex-Postmaster General of the defunct Confederacy; Oliver Johnson, editor of the Anti-Slavery Standard, and Henry Ward Beecher. They had a long and animated conversation about the war, reconstruction, and the future of the country, and seemed to agree admirably in country, and seemed to agree admirably in their conclusions.

The late rebellion threw men into strange positions, but I do not think a greater variety of discordent elements could have been assembled together, than was in that coterie. The most ultra and life-long Abolitionists met and fraternized with the most violent secessionists. The old fable of the lamb and lion lying down together is not half so remarkable as was this conglomeration of political antipodes.

Rev. R. J. Breckinridge, D. D., who is announced to preach this morning at the Central Presbyferian Church, and this evening at the first, is now returning to his home in Danville, Kentucky, from a visit to Washington and Jefferson College, Pennsylvania, to which newly-united institution he has been unanimously elected President. Dr. Breckinridge reached Canonsburg, in company with Rev. Dr. Beatty, of Steubenville, Ohio, on Thursday of last week, and held an extended conference with the Trustees and Faculty, and addressed the students with great acceptance. We believe he has not yet decided whether to identify himself with the college, or remain in Kentucky to advocate the interests of the Church and State, amid his life associations, in these times of trial. Wherever ciations, in these times of trial. Wherever he may go, and whatever he may do, will be for the advancement of the great cause of liberty and religion.—Cin. Com.

ONE EVIL OF GOING TOO FAST.

At the close of the first day's session of the Georgia Constitutional Convention, the telegraph announced to the country that the telegraph announced to be harmonious population, as a direct result of the lanta's visit, it is yet not improbable and conservative. Taking this as an augury of the sincere and practical adoption by the members of the principles which had been elucidated and established by the fortunes of our civil war, it was all the more gratifying to us from its having been unlooked for. To our notions of healthy human development, the displacement of the unsoundness and rottenness out of which rebellion came, by sound vitalizing oyalty to what is to-day really republican, would require a much longer time than the South had yet had. The practice of forcing things has long been a chronic disease in this country. We thought the President and some others in high places had shown symptoms of his disease in dealing with the Southern States, When, then, it was said that the Georgia Convention gave promise of being harmonious and conservative, there seemed to be a chance for some ambiguity of meaning. Just what the conservatism of that very august body might prove to be, might be a matter for painful apprehension; and its harmony might be so like the honor that is said to exist among thieves, as to go hand in hand with rebellious speaking and voting. The omens had been bad; decidedly inauspicious. That precipitating of measures and events, looking to immediate reconstruction, was a bad omen; the political status of the members of the Geoegia Convention, nearly all unpardoned and unamnestied, was an omen full of foreboding; the forwardness with which those who had been bitterest in disloyal speeches and deeds, thrust before their country their professions of willingness and desire to at one for all they had done, in any way the General Government might ordain, was a most portentious omen the early clamor for the removal of the troops, inexplicable on the ground that those making it intended fidelity to their professions, was another bad omen.

Yet the powers that be ordained that the experiment should be tried. And we have the humiliating spectacle of political demagogues and gamblers, men who risked and ost every thing in the cause of the rebellion. coming forward and claiming the privilege of having the constitutions of the new States represent and protect the principles which gave birth to the rebellion. Probably none of the States that have held Constitutional Conventions for reconstruction, so forcibly illustrate this as Georgia-the State that next to North Carolina showed the largest Union sentiment in 1861, and which gave Jeff. Davis and his Government the most trouble. The members elected to the Convention met, and after taking an oath to his neck. "henceforth faithfully support, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States and the Union of the States thereunder. proceeded to business.

Business seems to have been taken up and transacted, without greatly belying the promise at the outset of harmony and conservatism ruling its sittings, although its attitude is described as "highly sensitive and almost belligerent." The Governor in his message reported the entire debt of the State at $20,813,525, of which $18,135,750 was contracted in support of the rebellion. This latter portion of the debt, he took great pains to show that Georgia could not, and must not, be expected to pay. Any such step as its payment was forbidden by three plain and indeniable facts: the position of the State at the time the debt was created; the objects for which it was contracted and the money used, and the contingency on which its pay ment was made to depend. The issue of the war had extinguished all claims from this source, and left no legal or moral obligation to pay resting upon the Georgia of o-day. Hence, to talk of repudiation in connection with the payment of such debts would be but a perversion of language, and evince an unprincipled and reckless attempt to sustain a desperate cause by resorting to the blackguard's favorite mode of argument, the use of "odious words and opprobrious epithets."

The position of Governor Johnson as Provisional Governor, acting under the direct instructions of the President, was proof presumptive that he spoke as one having authority to speak on all questions affecting the resumption of the relations of State to the United States. A disclaimer of such authority by him was necessary before any man in that Convention, without violating the spirit of his oath and belying his pro fessions of loyalty, could go behind the recommendations and statements of his mes sage. There were three topics brought forward, and it was distinctly stated what action the General Government required the applying State to take on each as a con dition of admission. The Governor summed up the whole matter about paying the rebel war debt by saying:

"In a word, ordain solemnly and delib erately, that no Legislature, now or hereafter, shall, directly or indirectly, in whole or in part, assume to pay, in any manner, these demands, unconstitutional in their creation, and many of them without even the countenance of equity to support them.' After listening to this message, who but a determined rebel would get up in any but a rebel convention, as Mr. Warren, of Pulaski, did in this same Convention, and move, that a committee be appointed to "wait upon his Excellency, the Provisional Governor, and inquire of him whether he knows, from his official connection with the authorities at Washington, that the repudiation of the debt incurred by the State of Georgia during the late civil war, is essential to the resumption of amicable relations with the United States Government?"

Surely here was effrontery enough to set up Mr. Warren in the eyes of all zebeldom. As if he had requested the Convention to choose a committee to wait upon his Excellency and inquire of him if he had not received instructions from Washington to eat his'own words. We shall have occasion to refer again to the proceedings of the Convention on this subject.

to whether the Journal's assertion that the two columns of the Press, of Saturday, written in reply to one of its articles, was a worry through "dense prejudice, childish credulity and besotted ignorance," was intended as a confession that it "is floored," or as a compliment to the ability of the Press. It may have intended the former. as nothing is more common than for men squarely cornered to call that prejudice and ignorance, which they cannot argue against Or it may have intended it as a compliment inasmuch as we refuted it out of the mouth of its own witnesses? How about the editorials of the Montgomery Advertiser, and Flake's Bulletin, and the speeches of Gen erals Tillson and Fullerton being "dense prejudice, childish credulity and besotted ignorance?" Has the Journal "worried" through them?

Seward-The Crops.

Isaac Newton, Commissioner of Agriculture, in his report for October, says the threshing of the wheat has shown that the injuries received from the wet weather were over estimated in the report for August.

The returns of the wheat crop showed in quantity and quality, that there was a deficit of 26,241,698 bushels, but estimates now made, which are final, exhibit the decrease under last years' crop to be 121,729,990 bushels. Increase in the cat crop of 1865

is nearly 50,000,000 bushels, and of the hay

rop more than 500,000 tuns.

The tables exhibit the fall crops as most abundant; that of corn is all that could be desired. It will be the largest ever grown in the United States; that plenty of cereal food will bless the country and the labors of the former.

der of the Brooklyn Navy Yard should be placed at their disposal for the purpose of taking on board persons who have come to this port on vessel or vessels that may bring cases of cholera. Mayor Gunther, to whom the subject was referred, has written an order to the Commander of the Navy Yard, and a vessel is to be dispatched to lower quarantine as soon as possible. The passengers of the steamer Atlanta, who have not yet been at-acked by cholera, are to be taken on board this vessel.

It is reported to-night that eleven new cases of cholera have appeared on the Atlanta, all among the steerage passengers.

The great feature of the session was the continuod active description. 计算数据 and prices were all higher. The great feature of the session was the continued movement in Prairie du Chien stock, which started at 156 and jumped up to 220. The excitement was intense, and eclipsed anything in the history of stock exchange, throwing the Harlem corner entirely in the shade. It is reported that 60,000 shares have been sold short, while there were only 29,000 issued. It was thought this morning that the corner would prove very disastrons

THE RIVER was rising slowly yesterday, with four feet nine inches water in the canal in the evening, by the mark. During the previous twenty-four hours it had risen five inches at the head of the falls, and fifteen inches at the Portland wharf. The weather-was cold and clear in the morning, with ice, and a heavy frost, but during the day it moderated very materially, and the Barometer fell to 29.5-10. It had been up to 29.7-10. The thermometer at noon stood at 50.

On the Portland and New Albany bars, at the foot of the falls, there is about seven and a half feet water, the river having risen altogether at that point some three feet, making a fair stage of water.

The towboat V. F. Wilson came in from Pittsburg early yesterday, with a tow of five barges of coal for Cairo. They were drawing a little less than five feet water, and were taken through the canal.

Fifteen of the fleet of tow-boats that left

Pittsburg on the late rise, had arrived at Cincinnati Thursday. The most of them returned to Pittsburg, leaving their coal in that port.

OFFICE OF THE LOUISVILLE UNION PRESS, MONDAY EVENING, November 6, 1865. The market was rather quiet to-day in most of he cading departments, with, however, heavy orders accumulating from the South for the usual plantation supplies. breadstuffs, too, are in fair demand, and the mar-ket is fully sustained. The demand for bagging and rope, and India baggin

It is time the and K-niucky hemp is equally scarce. It is time the Kentucky farmers should turn their extention again to the culture of being and them anufacture of bagging and rope. Heretofore they were among the leading articles of her trade, if not the foremost. To maintain, or rather to reasin, her supremacy in the Southern trade, the culture of hemp and the making of bagging and rope should be more generally engaged in. It was only last week that we noticed among the exports to St. Louis the material of second-less representations.

we noticed among the exports to St. Louis the material of a complete rope-walk.

Some articles of country pro uce are less active than heretofore, though other articles continue enhanced, owing to the scant supply. We noticed on the wharf to day a sale of 41 bbls onlons at $2.65 per bbl. A lot of $5 bales good timothy hay sold on the wharf at $16 per ton.

The hog slaughtering season has commenced to-day with the killing of a lot of 1,760 hogs purchased by a provision dealer, to be cut up for bacon and lard. We hear of no sales or contracts for hogs for packing. The weather yesterday and to-day was propitious for pork-packing. A portion of the trade and commerce of the city is be-ing directed to other channels for the want of unity of action among our merchants and shippers. It is in the power of the Louisville merchants to concentrate the great bulk of the trade along both the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers to this city. All that is required of the business men is to give their business, their freights, &c.

to the legitimate packets in the trade of the different rivers. Enterprizing boat owners are prepared to place three boats permanently in the Cumberland river trade, and two in the Tennessee. The meeting at the Mer-chants' Exchange to-day was adjourned to Wednesday evening for the especial consideration of the establish-ment of permanent packets to these rivers. It is to be should, take an earnest interest in the matter, and its ac omplishment is assured.

It is not necessary to publish a long list of diseases for which the CEDRON BITTEKS are a Specific. In all iseases of the STOMACH, BOWELS, LIVER or KIDNEVS; in affections of the BRAIN, dependin pon derangement of the Stomach or Bowels; in GOUT, RHEUMATISM and NEURALGIA, and a FEVER and AGUE, it is destined to supersede 1 ther remedies. It not only cures these diseases, but revents them. A wine-glass full of the BITTERS, aken an hour before each meal, will obviate the ill-effect of the most unhealthy climate, and secure the aker gainst diseases under the most rying exposure.

SYMPTOMS. The Symtoms of Catarrh are at first very slight. Pertons find they have a cold, then they have frequent at-tacks, and are more sensitive to the changes of tempera-ture. In this condition, the ness may be dry, or a slight lischarge, thin and acrid, afterward thick and adhesive reased in quantity and changed in quality; they are now hick and heavy, and are hawked or coughed off. The seretions are offensive, causing a bad breath; the voice thick and nasal; the eyes are weak; the sense of smell lessened or destroyed; deafness frequently takes place. Another common and important symptom of Catarrh is hat the person is obliged to clear his throat in the morn ing of a thick or slimy muceus, which has fallen from the head during the night. When this takes place the person may be sure that his disease is on its way to the lungs, and should lese no time in arresting it.

The above are but few of the many Catarrhal symptoms.

Write for our pamphlet describing fully all symptoms; it will be sent FREE to any address.
